Course aim

In this course we will reflect on the role of Health Psychology and particularly on how it affects healthcare experiences. We will also discuss how to promote healthier lifestyles, the barriers and enablers of this and focus in particular on a model of behaviour change that is very used in Health Psychology in changing behaviours such as smoking. Finally, we will apply all these approaches to two specific health conditions, chronic pain and stress, to better understand how wide-reaching Health Psychology can be in promoting physical and psychological wellbeing.

Course Outcomes

- Recognise the definition of Health Psychology
- Identify the scope of impact of Health Psychology
- Recognise approaches to promoting healthy lifestyles
- Identify the stages of the one model of behaviour change
