Course aim

The Catuvellauni were a late Iron Age tribe whose territory included present day Hertfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Bedfordshire and Northamptonshire. This course looks at the archaeological evidence of this tribe from its origin in the late Iron Age and on into the Roman period. It looks at the tribal territory, the establishment of its tribal and later regional centre at St Albans, urban and rural settlement, communications, religion, industry and the economy. With reference to Northamptonshire, the course examines the organisation of the region in the Roman period and considers the archaeological evidence from some of the many sites within the county and in the bordering counties.

Course outcomes

1. Examine the impact of Roman rule on the resident Iron Age population in Northamptonshire
2. Identify and evaluate the organisation of the rural countryside, considering the status and functionality of settlements like that seen at Chester Farm, Irchester.
3. Attain an understanding of the sites and remains of the Iron Age and Roman period that have been found in the county.
4. Develop a concept of what life in this part of the England would have been like in Iron Age and Roman times.
