Course aims

This four session course is an introduction to the fascinating world of underwater archaeology, looking at some of the exciting discoveries that have been made around the UK and in other parts of the world. Underwater archaeology is a relatively new field of study and has advanced considerably over the past 50 years. This short course will introduce you to the pioneers of underwater archaeology and look at some of the exciting discoveries including shipwrecks, lost cities, and some of the other finds from the seabed.

Course Outcomes

Demonstrate and understanding of the development of underwater archaeology as a discipline.
Recognise the diverse nature and age of the material evidence that lies on the seabed.
Show an appreciation of what studying the underwater evidence can contribute to our understanding of past times and ways of life.
Demonstrate an awareness of the museums where underwater finds are displayed and some of the processes involved in preserving some of this material for future generations.

How will the course be taught?

The course will be taught online via Zoom and will be a live interactive course. Joining instructions along with a unique log-in for the session will be emailed to you by our support services team prior to the course start date, so please check your email address mail box. To take part in the course learners will need either a computer, laptop or tablet connected to the internet and able to view live stream video.

What do I need to bring / have ready?

You only need to bring yourself. The course is supported by an online information page that will be regularly updated with copies of the presentations and information on recommended reading books and other relevant material.
